Chickens:

Black Australorp: Tight feathered and heavysset birds. They are solid black, with an iridescent green sheen. Excellent dual-purpose birds as they are large when mature and great layers. Tend to have docile, yet curious dispositions. Hens weigh around 8 pounds.

Buff Orpington: Very large, fluffy, and heavysset solid yellow birds. They are moderately good layers (200 - 280 eggs per year), but are excellent pets as they enjoy being around people. Slow to mature, and can be bullied by more dominant birds. Hens weigh around 8 pounds.

Dark Brahma: Large, white and black birds who reach around 7-8 pounds. They are very calm and docile. Laying brown eggs and are winter hardy. Average around 200 eggs per year.

Easter Egger: Extremely docile, family friendly birds. They are both heat and cold hardy. Hens weigh around 5 pounds and grow to be a variety of colors. They lay large colorful eggs that range from olive green to turquoise blue and occasionally rose or brown. They are similar to Ameraucanas.

Black Sex Link: Medium sized birds who are heavy layers - 250+ light brown eggs per year when mature! Hens weigh around 5-6 pounds and are black and brown with tints of green. Excellent cold-hardiness.

Rainbow: These dual purpose birds lay an average of 250 medium brown eggs per year. They are very unique in coloring as no two birds look the same. They are very winter hardy, heat resistant and occasionally broody. Docile and friendly.

Rhode Island Red: Heavier birds who are also dual-purpose. Excellent layers of large, light to medium brown colored eggs. They are a dark red, and have some black feathering in their tails. Hens weigh around 7 pounds.

Speckled Sussex: Heavy, dual-purpose birds who are also very cold hardy. Good layers of large, light brown and tinted eggs. Their plumage is distinct as they have a dark mahogany base with individual feathers ending in a black bar and white tip. These birds also make excellent show poultry due to their intelligent and mellow demeanor.

Wyandotte: Gold or Silver Laced; Dual purpose birds weighing 6-9lbs. They lay brown eggs, 220-280 per year. Docile and friendly. They are winter hardy, and not broody.

Turkeys:

Broad Breasted (BB) White: Very large turkeys bred for meat production. These are your typical grocery store variety turkey, and can reach 50 pounds at full maturity. Their white feathers leave no pin marks when the birds are dressed.

Broad Breasted (BB) Bronze: Large turkeys bred for meat production. They are known for their coppery-bronze coloration, and can reach between 30 - 50 pounds at maturity.

If you are looking for white egg laying birds please don't be afraid to ask!!
